DID YOU KNOW?

- The only other substance more plentiful than protein in the body is water. Approximately 18-20% of the body is protein by weight.
- Protein is a macronutrient that provides energy and supports lean muscle mass in the body. Protein is also crucial to other body properties including red blood cell production, organ function, mobility, and joint integrity, muscle tone, and immune function, just to name a few.
- Protein provides a satiating feeling when consumed, which can help people consume fewer calories and maintain a healthy weight.
- The word "protein" comes from the Greek word "proteios," meaning primary or holding the first place.
